

HATCH CHILE SEASON: THE MOST WONDERFUL TIME OF THE YEAR

AUGUST 2, 2022
BY ANGIE QUEBEDEAUX

If you've lived in Dallas for any amount of time, you're already familiar with Hatch chile season — a time of year when restaurants and grocery stores throughout North Texas fill their menus and shelves with everything Hatch.

The season starts at the beginning of August and lasts about a month. The chiles are grown in a specific soil and climate in Hatch, New Mexico, harvested by the ton, then shipped around the world. We've rounded up a list of some of the best places to indulge in these chiles around North Texas. Do yourself a favor and find some before they're gone.

Eatzi's Market & Bakery

Eatzi's Market and Bakery will have Hatch specialties Aug. 4 – 17. Grab-and-go items include Hatch chile chicken empanadas, chicken salad, chile hummus, queso and pimento cheese. Eatzi's ready-to-eat meals will include a Hatch chile bacon cheddar burger and a Southwest-inspired Hatch turkey meatloaf served with fresh tortillas.
