The days of making a peanut butter and jelly sandwich are over. Dallas has something even better up its sleeve: these can't-miss sandwich spots. Whether you want a quick lunch, a sandwich made just as you like it, or something new, we've got you covered. Here are seven Dallas sandwich shops to visit.

Eatzi's Market & Bakery

Make your way past the fresh flowers, the smell of homemade bread and the friendly chefs to find the true gem of this "European-style eatery" – the sandwich bar. Here, the perfect sandwich is within reach. This is the place for you if you want a sandwich with a little bit of everything or a simple ham and cheese. Make your way through the various bread choices (from homemade sourdough to fresh baguettes), spreads, meat, cheese, and toppings to create your ideal lunch. Here's a pro tip: ask for a little olive oil and salt and pepper on top to take it to the next level. Or don't. That's the beauty of Eatzi's– it's up to you.
